

Process Your Photos. Do It Wisely.

October 2009. AccentSoft announces the new version of the premier product for processing digital photos – SnapTouch 2.90. Copying photos to the computer in a smart way, cropping photos and stamping the date on them – these are the distinctive features of SnapTouch. Our web site now contains a page with video tutorials showing how to use SnapTouch.

SnapTouch copies and sorts photos from your camera or card reader connected to your computer according to the rules you specify. SnapTouch groups photos by folders and assigns names to files taking into account the date when each photo was taken. Vertically oriented photos are automatically rotated with no loss of quality.

Cropping photos to certain proportions helps you create a more distinctive shot out of a photo by eliminating the unnecessary parts. By properly using cropping, you can avoid mistakes that frequently occur when your photos are printed in photo labs: trimmed photos with white stripes at their sides. Cropping is done without any loss in the photo quality and can be done very quickly with batch processing

Stamping the date of shooting on photos makes them more informative both when you view them on the computer and later when you print them in a photo lab. Years later we often look back on photos and wonder when they were taken, so this feature comes in very handy. Like cropping, stamping the date can also be done very quickly with batch processing.

Copying photos from the camera to the computer in a smart way, cropping photos to certain proportions and stamping the date of shooting on photos – these are the main, but far from all, features available in SnapTouch.

The SnapTouch web site has a constantly updated section with video tutorials on how to use SnapTouch. Be sure to visit www.snaptouch.com for more information.
